Today we have the debut of Serhiy Kabud. Now I will list all his credentials. Master of metaphysics, historian, researcher of the subtle plane. He works at the intersection of mathematics, physics, Kabbalah, and Vedic knowledge. Welcome, Serhiy. Glad to see you on our channel. Let's talk. Glory to Ukraine! And glory to the heroes! Death to all those who wish evil upon us, Ukrainians, and Ukraine. I hope this year brings us to a new level.

Let's talk about what 2026 holds for us, for Ukrainians and for Ukraine. We can also devote some time to the topic of what will happen to our enemy. And perhaps we'll talk about allies as well. A lot of interesting things are happening right now. We see that Putin visited China, and before that Trump visited China. And all this is happening after Ukraine launched drones on the territory of the Russian Federation.

So there is a feeling that something is being decided there. I would like to talk about this with you and hear your opinion. The floor is yours.

Yes, this year is the year of great changes.

Even Vedic prophecies and Vedic astrology indicate that 2026 is the year of entering a new era. We have all heard about the Age of Aquarius. We roughly understand these Vedic concepts of long eras that change from positive to negative and vice versa.

It seems that this is exactly what is happening this year. It is also very important to recall the biblical prophecy that at the end of the worlds we will see a lot of lies and so-called false prophets will arise.

We saw this with Marxism in the 20th century. And at the end of the worlds, a process of removing masks will occur. That is, it will become clear who is who and what is actually happening. This is also described as the model of the Last Judgment.

A very interesting observation concerns the influence of the global Internet network and modern tools like artificial intelligence. We have an effect where no secrets remain — in fact, all mysteries are revealed. We know how to find answers to questions. Sometimes artificial intelligence does not satisfy us very much, but the tool is already working.

So we can say that at some point a situation will arise where everyone will carry a sign that says what they have done — good or bad. Actually, the Last Judgment is described as joy for the righteous and a very bad situation for the unrighteous.

Beautiful.

Yes, and a very interesting historical node is being observed.

We see a completely new arrangement of major figures on the world chessboard. We see an extremely unexpected role for the United States, which no longer positions itself as a Cold War player, but on the contrary demonstrates some strange neutrality.

The question arises: "What is happening?" We need to recall such a thing as nuclear weapons. And how much investment has been put into it? According to our estimates, only the Soviet Union (Soviet, let's say, because no one was consulted there) invested no less than trillions of dollars, if we start counting from the beginning of the nuclear program.

So these people will not let go of it. This is their main instrument. Therefore, the United States must act to prevent escalation that could lead to nuclear war. That is why this strange game is happening. At the same time, they support Ukraine and at the same time stage constant circuses regarding the Russian Federation.

Returning to 2026, what can we expect? About two years ago, the topic of modern Ukrainian weapons already began to take shape. And since then we have been observing how this topic is gaining momentum. More than a year ago, we already heard forecasts from experts that Ukrainian missiles would become a game changer, that is, completely change the picture. And not only missiles, but also drones.

Then many asked the question: “Will this really happen? Are these real ‘flamingos’ or something else?” But now we see that all of this is absolutely real. And all those forecasts that a year ago seemed somewhat fantastic, now we see that they are not fantastic at all.

Regarding when the war will end, we do not know the exact answer. The future cannot be known precisely, because each of us influences how it is realized. But we see the general main trend. We see that the Russian terrorist federation is gradually weakening, while Ukraine is getting stronger.

Although for many this may be unexpected, there is a feeling that the great role of Moscow (the center of the USSR, the center of the Marxist movement, or any other role) is disintegrating. Moscow is ceasing to play any role in the great game on the chessboard. Kyiv is taking its place and assuming all responsibility.

We already know almost for sure that the future world order will have three main players: the United States (the leader of the world, the most effective democratic republic), the People’s Republic of China (due to its power, and we hope that reforms in the PRC will continue), and Ukraine.

Previously, the third player was Moscow, but now we are taking third place. This is objective, because Ukrainians produce the best modern weapons. Whoever has the best weapons essentially dictates their terms. We already see that the European region will most likely need Ukraine as a defender.

Why not the United States? This is also a very important point.

The United States is a large nation of almost 340 million people that has participated in many wars. Almost all the wars that the States fought were won on the battlefield but lost politically.

Because, as they say in the United States, the American eagle needs two wings — left and right. The United States has a powerful left political force, its own Marxism, and its own left-wing politics. This also needs to be taken into account.

In the 1950s, Stepan Bandera (this book contains many of his articles) around 1955 published a series of articles. One of them was called “The Perspective of the Ukrainian Revolution.” The most interesting thing is that he described our time there — the end of Russian Bolshevism and communism, which countries joined the union of captive nations, and how the United States would play in this.

The main element regarding the United States that Bandera named was this: The United States is a very large nation, they will turn very slowly, but when they get on the right course, there will be no force that can stop them.

We are observing this now — the slow turnaround of the United States.

We should also mention the assassination of President Kennedy in the early 1960s.

He was killed by a man who had previously defected to the side of the Soviet Union and lived there for two years. We have enough data to believe that this was an operation of the Soviet Union.

The United States has never officially admitted this, just as it has not admitted the role of the Soviet Union in the assassination of Robert Kennedy, or the role of Moscow in the attacks of September 11, 2001.

If they admit this officially, it would mean they must take revenge and fight Russia, and that would be nuclear war. Therefore, the United States plans to do it differently.

On September 11, two of the most prestigious skyscrapers were destroyed. The terrorists were recruited by structures connected to the Kremlin. President Trump knows this very well. He had a friend, Rupert Murdoch. In 2001, Murdoch received information from an employee of his Polish media concern that Russians were involved in September 11. The Wall Street Journal conducted an investigation and even reached the FSB, which confirmed that in 1996 FSB officers had the second-in-command of Al-Qaeda after bin Laden — Al-Zawahiri — and they recruited him. The material was published.

But officially, the United States has never stated their involvement. This means only one thing — a serious plan is being prepared, because no one is going to forgive this.

Let's analyze China as well. Let's finish with Putin's visit and Trump's visit.

Trump, again, the media wrote that this could indicate a secret conspiracy, about China entering the war.

We understand that China is Russia's right hand. And here Trump went to China. What will happen next? What is it really for? Let's figure it out. The floor is yours.

So, I want to remind you a bit of our history.

After the Bolshevik coup, the civil war continued, then it was replaced by the New Economic Policy (NEP).

The Bolshevik government realized that to adjust economic life, they needed to return to a market economy. The central influence on Lenin was Volodymyr Zatonsky — a Ukrainian political figure with education in chemistry and mathematics. He can be considered an alchemist.

He looked at politics differently. He understood that Bolshevism could not be stopped, and to do something for Ukraine, one had to be inside the process. This is how the NEP was born. The New Economic Policy was almost entirely tailored to the Ukrainian farmer.

The economy of the Russian Empire was predominantly agrarian, and the farmers were our compatriots who lived not only on the territory of modern Ukraine but throughout the empire. Ukrainian farmers benefited greatly from the NEP. It was a pro-Ukrainian policy.

It was planned for a minimum of 20–30 years, but things turned out differently. Stalin seized power, stopped this policy, and moved on to preparing for war with the world.

When Khrushchev came to power, he repeated this policy and tried to start a second round of the new economic policy with liberalization, a market economy, and a multi-party system. That is, Khrushchev was practically going to return capitalism. He did not succeed very well, although much was achieved: the Gulag was stopped, the camps were opened, millions of people returned.

Let's move to the times of perestroika.

Gorbachev announced freedom and a free economy — this is a continuation of the same pro-Ukrainian policy. It was carried out by Stavropol Ukrainians: Andropov, Gorbachev, and Rozumovsky.

We see that Ukrainians in the history of the USSR always pursued a liberal, pro-Western line.

Why is this important in the context of China? In the late 1950s – early 1960s, Khrushchev (Ukrainian Khrushchev) conducted negotiations with Kennedy and with the leadership of the PRC. He lobbied both sides — the USA and China — for a new economic policy. Both sides agreed.

The Chinese began reforms after Mao's death. China considers the 20th century lost due to communism, which was imposed by the Russians and which destroyed approximately, according to available estimates, no less than 80 million Chinese.

The real number of victims of communism only on the territory of the USSR reaches about 130 million. Of these, approximately 55 million are killed Ukrainians.

(A short minute of silence in memory of the victims.)

Returning to China:

Ukraine gave birth to this policy that Khrushchev implemented and that he lobbied for China. This is a Ukrainian idea — a new economic turn toward capitalism. China should be grateful specifically to Ukrainians.

It is very important that the Ukrainian Ministry of Foreign Affairs conveys this to the PRC.

Chinese reforms have not stopped. Now China has hit a dead end because they need political reforms. The dominance of the Communist Party is without alternatives. They spend a lot of money on projects that lead nowhere.

The entire planet is interested in the continuation of reforms in China.

The Chinese leadership has more complicated relations with Russia than we imagine. China fears Russia because of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons. Moscow knows how the Chinese government hides in the event of war.

Therefore, China acts extremely carefully. Beijing is actually negotiating with the USA against the Russian Federation. Russia's activities in terrorism and wars hinder the interests of everyone, especially China, which needs secure trade.

The end of the war has already been decided.

And most likely, it has been decided for several years. This is an analytical conclusion based on history, culture, and politics.

Russia is facing a state coup in the summer. Things are no longer as good for them as they were before.

In reality, everything is falling apart now. We are witnessing the beginning of the end. The leadership of the RF understands this, which is why they are resisting. They have no way out.

Their system was built on nuclear weapons. The collapse of the USSR was initiated by Stalinists to preserve nuclear weapons and the possibility of nuclear war against the West.

Friends, if you have questions, ask them in the comments. We are live.

Let's talk about the future of Ukraine. Internal processes directly affect the external perception of the country.

All this series of unpleasant news regarding NABU, SAP, and how the leadership is stealing resources during the war — it is disgusting and revolting. Let's figure out why this system was launched and where its roots come from.

The floor is yours.

Our point of view is as follows.

The collapse of the USSR was a process in which many forces participated, including the Ukrainian national movement. But the determining factor was the issue of nuclear weapons.

The design of the USSR's collapse and the political systems for the republics had built-in elements for a possible return of the USSR. Ukraine is a particularly important element because it was Ukrainians who produced the entire military-industrial complex.

Therefore, we entered independence along the path paved by the KGB of the USSR and the CPSU. Our constitution contains many contradictions.

In Ukraine, real leadership often belonged to the heads of parliamentary factions. There are many hidden moments. Many issues are decided by approximately 300–400 key positions.

There have been various attempts to straighten out the situation: reforms, NABU, SAP, etc. It is not easy to figure this out. In my opinion, Ukraine inherited more Byzantine practices than Russia.

Internal scandals also have another side.

In Ukraine, there is traditionally hatred for the top leadership. But now there is a war. Ukrainians die every day.

The military machine is a hierarchical structure. The Commander-in-Chief is like the pilot of an airplane. If we start storming the cockpit, we will all fly into hell.

Therefore, we need to support the leadership's rating. People's motivation to join the Armed Forces depends on it.

Paradoxically, the scandal in the Oval Office with Trump was beneficial for Ukraine. We saw Zelenskyy as a leader who can even contradict the President of the United States. This raised his rating.

Finally, let's talk about the situation on the border with Belarus.

The hysteria in the media emotionally shakes us.

What will happen next? To what extent will Belarus become a transit part of the war? What will happen to the Baltic states?

In my opinion, the terrorist federation is losing. The pressure on the Belarusian direction is an information operation.

We are now experiencing the First World Information War. The information component has the greatest influence.

Two fundamental principles of war:

1. Sun Tzu: all wars are won by methods of deception and disinformation.

2. Clausewitz: the fog of war — reliable information practically does not exist.

Therefore, we need unwavering faith in victory and complete trust in the leadership.

The Belarusian story is information compensation for Russia's losses. The Armed Forces will take care of the technical level. Analytically — an invasion is unlikely.

How will Ukraine be perceived in the future?

Soviet weapons were built mostly by Ukrainians. The Chinese still modify samples created by Ukrainians.

Ukraine must win this war. The economy will be completely rebuilt on a technological basis. The military-industrial complex and science will become the locomotive of development.

We will pursue a policy of absorption — we will return millions of Ukrainians. There will be money, land, and motivation.

Ukraine will take the place previously occupied by the empire. Without a doubt.

Mr. Serhiy, thank you for such a journey into history. Thank you for being with us.
